

The Yorkshire Archaeological Journal, 1902, Vol. 16 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Yorkshire Archaeological Journal, 1902, Vol. 16. Mr. S. J. Chadwicks careful account of the Cistercian Abbey of Kirkstall will, it is hoped, be the commencement of a series of monographs on the smaller religious houses in the county. Mr. J. Eyre Poppletons article on the Church Bells in the West Riding is an example of accuracy and industry. The Yorkshire Pardons and Indulgences, edited by Canon Wordsworth, and Archbishop Lees Visitations in 1534-5, afford valuable materials for forming an opinion of the state of religion in Yorkshire in the century preceding the Reformation. The certificates of alleged cures of lunacy by a Wakefield quack in 1615 show that quack remedies were as popular in the seventeenth century as in the twentieth.
